"LOVE IS LOVE FOR EVERMORE"

I love you; not that you are kind
(At least not always kind to me)
Your moods are changing as the wind,
I never know how that you may be
Today, perhaps, the better mood,
Tomorrow, out, with bitter doubt.

I love you; not that you are wise
(At least, not wise in loving me)
The foolishness in my eyes is yours,
The best of all the things that be
Your wisdom, darling, you may give
To your own folk with whom you live.

I love you; yet, for my own peace,
I would not love you, for I know
That love is love, and will not cease,
Not tried to reason's wear away,
Our poet's words are true for me,
And "love is love for evermore."

Perchance, because I love you not,
For your own sake, and not for mine,
Some day I'll wake, and find that you
Have taught love's lesson, sweetest pain,
And live in perfect happiness,
Will urge in me "for evermore."

"THE QUEEN'S GOVERNMENT MUST BE SUPPORTED"

When the Corn Laws Abolition Act came to the House of Lords, I said to Lyndhurst that he was bound to defend it. "No," answered he, "this is unnecessary, for the Duke of Wellington has secured a majority in its favour, although he thinks as badly of it as I should have done. I am sure that if I addressed a Conservative peer, who came to lament to him that he must on this occasion vote against the Government, having signed a bad opinion of the Bill—Bad opinion of the Bill, my lord! You can't have a worse opinion of it than I have; but it was recommended from the Throne, it has passed the Commons by a large majority, and we must vote for it. The Queen's Government must be supported!"—(Campbell's Life of Lyndhurst).—The General Election of 1880.

YELLOW RAIN.

The recent researches of men of science would seem to demonstrate conclusively that at least the lower regions of the atmosphere are pervaded by solid particles, not only of a mineral but an organic nature. The dust of all surrounding the globe appears to be a full of life as the sea which up its contents. Samples of these minute bodies are occasionally brought to the earth for our inspection in drops of rain; and a curious instance of the kind has just been announced. On the 25th of April last at the village of Bonnevill, and in the environs of Geneva as well as at other places in Switzerland, showers of rain fell; and it was observed that the drops, while being very rare in number and fine in size, were tinged with yellow and left a brownish stain behind them on the clothes and umbrellas. Fortunately for science Professor Plantamour, of the Geneva Observatory, collected some of this colouring matter, and after a careful examination it was found to be a mixture of organic and mineral matter. This eminent French biologist reports the yellow residue to be of vegetable origin, and mingled with the spores of ferns or other flowerless plants. The Bonnevill rain was almost entirely tinted with organic drags; but the Geneva drags were principally soiled with mineral matter. Moreover, on the same day the Alps snows, to a height of 3,000 feet, and on examination found to be streaked with sandy dust quite free from ferrous atoms, but comprising vegetable germs. Red snow is not unfrequently seen in Arctic regions; but seldom in these lower latitudes.—Globe.

QUEER STORIES.

"THE FORTUNE OF THE 'FRIED SOLE'."

"So Garbery has failed too," remarked Parkies, the solicitor, as he saw some bills announcing a sale put up in the windows of the "Fried Sole Hotel," at the corner of the Pig Market in Jewbury.

"Yes, failed, as Tibbery, Pemmies, and several others before him, he has failed in that house. I call it the waiting-room of the workhouse, I do," answered Mr. Vatter, for man to suit and Treacle, the local brewer; and he shook his head mysteriously. "Truth is, Mr. Parkies, I believe there's a spell on the place."

"I remember the time when it used to be the best hotel in the county," remarked the lawyer.

"Aye, so do we all who are getting on for fifty," replied Vatter. "The farmers used to have their ordinary there on market days; the freeholders had their meetings and dinners in the house; all the best barkeepers stopped there at Asize time; and, for bliss sake, you, at elections, when the 'Fried Sole' was the Conservative headquarters. I've seen twenty barrels of ale emptied there in an afternoon."

"There's no electrifying done there now," remarked Mr. Parkies, dryly.

"No; since old Dark, the last landlord who made a fortune there, hanged himself, there's been, as I just said, a spell on the place," repeated the brewers' foreman, and he shook his head mysteriously. "Truth is, Mr. Parkies, I believe there's a spell on the place."
